

HANNAH GIBBS

graphic designer, photographer, web designer

HELLO

A disposable camera that my mom gave me before I left for summer camp when I was 10 years old was the one thing that started it all. I discovered what I really love: graphic design, photography, and web design.

At the University of Northern Iowa, I dove into the world of photography, and I have yet to put my camera down. They say life is better in front of the lens, but the view from behind is just as good.

I found my career path in Graphic Technologies, where I learn all the different sides to graphic design - print and digital publishing. I also added on Computer Science with a double major in Interactive Digital Studies.

With experience since 2004, I design with simplicity, usability, and beauty in mind.
